

Adenoma sebaceum is a benign skin condition characterized by small, raised, yellowish papules. It is often associated with tuberous sclerosis complex (TSC). The lesions are typically found on the face, particularly around the nose and mouth. They are composed of disorganized sebaceous glands and other skin appendages. The condition is usually diagnosed clinically based on the appearance of the lesions.