

Lichen Myxedematosus

Lichen myxedematosus, or papular mucinosis, is characterized by a more or less extensive eruption of a

In a variant of lichen myxedematosus called ~~scleromyxedema~~ a generalized eruption of papules as in lichen myxedem erythema are found. There is marked accentuation of the skin folds, particularly on the face. Scleromyxe

Multiple dome-shaped papules with histopathologic features suggestive of papular mucinosis have been Histopathology .

In lichen myxedematosus, fairly large amounts of mucin are present. In contrast with pretibial myxedema